

Selectmen reject school funds for Shawsheen septic repairs

Wilmington selectmen have rejected an offer of $30,500 from the School Committee for the repair of the Shawsheen School septic system.

The offer was voted last month by the school committee after a septic system failure at the school. As a result of that failure, the septic system is now pumped weekly. Parents, concerned for the health of their children, have spoken before the selectmen, School Committee and Board of Health. The Board of Health has ruled that unless the septic system is repaired, the school cannot open in September.

Cost estimates for the repair of the system are in the vicinity of $80,000. In the annual town meeting, a budget item included $35,000 for septic system and roof repairs.

A central issue in the matter is the question of who, within the town budget, should pay for the repair. The Public Buildings Department, under the town hall side of the budget, is responsible for the building.

The School Department, which is the other side of the budget, has had a surplus in recent years. Additionally, the School Department has had a pattern of heavy spending in the last two months of the fiscal year, a change from five years ago.

Last year, the town accountant refused to approve payment of several bills incurred at the end of the fiscal year. She maintained that the School Department was trying to pay FY 1984 expenses with the surplus FY 1983 money.

The School Department sued, and last month, it won a decision.

In a letter granting the town the use of $30,500 in school surplus funds, school business manager Frank Antonelli gave conditions under which the money would be granted. One was that the town not appeal the decision. Another was that the town pick up the legal fees incurred by the School Department.

In Monday night's meeting, Selectman Rocco DePasquale made a motion to refuse the $30,500.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski said he would like the money — without the conditions.

"It seems that the School Committee had little concern for the children in the building, but rather for their own purposes in drawing up these conditions," said Selectman Bob Cain.

The town manager said that even without the $30,500, the septic system would be repaired. He said that the money budgeted in town meeting, together with money set aside for repaving the school parking lot, would be enough. Bids, he said, would be opened on Thursday at 11 a.m.

Oil leak scene

Part of the cleanup of the leaked oil at Wilmington High School involves a separation system installed last week. A vertical pipe was installed (arrow) through which ground water could be drawn, lowering the water table. With the water table lowered, the oil would then flow back into the open hole. The school was closed Wednesday, after the high water table forced oil into the boiler room (right). The building reopened Monday after a day-night work schedule all weekend remedied the immediate problem. Cleanup of the oil leak continues.

Oil leak closes high school

Wilmington High School was closed by fire officials for two and a half days last week after leaked oil seeped into the boiler room.

Classes resumed in the building on Monday.

The oil leak was discovered in April. Since then, crews have pumped oil out of the two tanks removed them, and pumped a considerable amount of oil and ground water out of the ground. No time was lost in the school until Wednesday afternoon closing. The immediate problem which closed the school was that with the rising water table from the rain the previous week, the oil backed up into the boiler room through holes that had been drilled in the floor.

Workers from Pollution Control Unlimited worked round-the-clock to correct the situation. A well-point was installed with a separation chamber, for the purpose of drawing down the ground water. Water was pumped all weekend, trucked to the town's sewage dumping station, and dumped into the sewer under careful controls.

A very large hole has been dug in the teachers' parking lot of the school, for the removal of the tanks and contaminated soil. Some 30 loads of soil have been removed, at a cost of over $2000 per load.

No estimates are available, though, of any cost of the project.

High school classes were held on Thursday at the Shriners' Auditorium on Fordham Road. Classes were cancelled for Friday. The state Dept. of Education has given the town an exemption from the required number of school days, due to the emergency situation.

Protesters get parade permit, use of common for Sunday after go-round in court

A protest group planning a weekend demonstration in Wilmington has been granted a parade permit and permission to use Wilmington Common on Sunday. Selectmen voted in a special meeting Monday morning to grant a permit which covered not only the time requested on Sunday, but also for one on Monday, which the group had not requested.

The selectmen on May 29 had voted to deny the permit, after it was brought out that the group was planning civil disobedience on Monday, June 18.

After the permit was denied, the group filed suit in Federal District Court in Boston, claiming a violation of their civil rights. The suit was brought against the town of Wilmington, the town manager and the selectmen by the New England Campaign to Stop the Euromissiles, along with Judy Freiwerth of Belmont and Anna Barbara Bruno of Wilmington.

A preliminary hearing was held before Judge Robert Keeton on Friday afternoon. The parties appeared before Judge Keeton again on Tuesday afternoon, and are scheduled again for Thursday morning.

On Friday, Judge Keeton urged the two parties to try to

'Issues of Stress' at health center

The quarterly meeting of the National Foundation for Ileitis and Colitis (NFIC) Educational Peer Support Group will be held Monday, June 18 at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington.

The topic of the 7:30 p.m. meeting is "Issues of Stress" featuring Rosalyn Dunn, psychotherapist.

This service is free and open to the public. Pre-registration is required by calling the Boston office of NFIC at 449-0324 or the Regional Health Center at 657-3910, ext. 567.

settle as much as possible during a recess. After a meeting lasting more than an hour, agreement had been reached on some points, but was lacking on several others. The town was asking for a $5 million insurance policy and a $1000 cleanup bond. Another point to be settled was the location of the rally and the parade route. The town was proposing the Whitefield School, while the protesters' first preference was Rotary Park, with the town common second.

In their Monday vote to grant the permit, the selectmen modified their conditions, including granting the use of the common on Sunday afternoon. They eliminated the insurance and bond requirement, but instead set a permit fee of $600. They also reserved the right to cancel the permit and prohibited the group from counseling people to commit civil disobedience.

In court Tuesday afternoon, Judge Keeton issued a ruling which eliminated the fee, the cancellation clause and the prohibition of counseling for civil disobedience. Judge Keeton had urged the two parties to negotiate the matters, but they had failed to reach an agreement.

The basis for the judge rejecting the conditions was that they placed a prior restraint on the right of free speech of the plaintiff, the protesters.

Also on Tuesday, the town filed a petition for affirmative relief, seeking an injunction to stop the protesters. Also, Avco Corporation was allowed to intervene as a third party, also seeking an injunction to stop the protesters.

Avco, which manufactures parts for missile systems, is the focus of the protest. The firm's Wilmington plant has been the scene of a small protest march every Tuesday morning since last year, as well other protest actions.

The permit, as granted by the selectmen allows the protesters to use the common from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. Sunday, and to march along Adams Street, Parker Street and Lowell Street to the Avco plant. After a moment of silence at the plant, the protesters plan to return to the common for a rally.

The permit for Monday grants the use of the Whitefield School grounds from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The protesters, however, will be gathering at St. Thomas Church and using the Adams Street - Parker Street route. The group has advertised on posters that Monday's events will include non-violent civil disobedience.

Final hearings in Whitefield

Joke about it if you will, gentle reader.

Tuesday, June 12 was the night of the full moon. It was also the last night that the Wilmington Board of Appeals met for decisions in the old Whitefield School, which for several years past has been the town hall annex.

The furniture was gone, save for one table and a few chairs. There was plenty of room in the hearing room, where hearings had always been cramped. It was also true that there were plenty of people.

Not counting the appeal board and the reporter there were 53 persons, ready to participate. There was a total of 14 cases to be heard.

Some were easy cases, but most were difficult. Chairman Bruce MacDonald had to, because of the noise, at times, threaten to clear the room of other persons. Many went out anyway. It was cooler outside.

William P. Nee of Harris Street did not get his appeal. He was the first to appear, and he sought to construct a garage, 25 feet from the street, the appeal board ruled that he had shown no hardship and denied his case.

William Berry of Nichols Street was granted the right to construct an addition to his home in the required reserve side yard. He would be, in effect, "squaring off" his home.

Oiga Caperei of Birchwood Road received permission to install a swimming pool in the required reserve side yard.

Mancini's Restaurant was again before the board of appeals. It seems that somewhere between the planning board and the board of appeals, and understanding of those who were preparing the case, no site approval plan had been approved which must be done by special permit. The appellants were instructed to take the case to the planning board. There was no problem that the appeals board could solve.

A second hearing was held regarding land owned by Steven Bottari of Medford. Christine Drive. It was an "official map" case, meaning that the portion of Christine Drive being discussed was not an accepted street. There had been a hearing before, asking for two house lots, and the neighbors had opposed. The case that time was lost.

This time only one house lot was asked for. Neighbors were present and opposed because of wetland problems.

Part of the answer was in a proposal for a sewer main from Prospect Street, a four inch main. The street abuts one side of the proposed lot. Further, the hearing was told, there would be no construction in wetland areas, and the house lot was in existence years ago and thereby qualified under the "Webber Amendment." That law, dating from 1954, allows Wilmington house lots which were in existence in 1954 to be used today for house lots, even though the general zoning had been changed.

Abutors John Kucinski and John Cusolito told the appeals board of water problems and how they have to pump their cellars. That, the appeals board said, was not under their jurisdiction. The conservation commission takes charge of water (wetland) cases, they were told.

A proposal to make two "hammerhead" lots at the end of Presidential Drive proved interesting. The lots divide up a big lot, but one with only 80 feet frontage. Neighbors Donald Weed and Norman Allison had their points to make.

Weed pointed out that the lot had already undergone a board of appeals hearing, and been granted a variance of only 80 feet, where 100 feet was required. But that, he was told, was under the older bylaws. The present bylaws allow 40 feet for "hammerhead" lots.

Presidential Drive is on the top of a rock hill. There is a place once known as the "race track" which figured in the conversation. There is also water on top of the hill on occasion.

That was Allison's point. There are places on that hill which have two inches of water in the cellar, he said, 11 months a year. Undoubtedly Mr. Allison was correct. Breaking into rock sometimes produces water in places where it was not expected to be.

Allison's remarks will have a chance to be proven, when the new cellar is made. They had no legal bearing on the case at hand however, and the appeal was granted.

Steve Lawrenson of Burlington Avenue presented the case of three house lots on Central Street in North Wilmington on which he hopes to build homes. Central Street is beside MacDonald Road and is known as Cobalt Street closer to Salem Street.

Lawrenson had a map dating back to 1915, showing the property as separate house lots. He presented that map when Bill Hooper of the planning board brought up Section 5.3.2, which is the legal title to what is called the Webber Amendment.

The map was all that was needed, but Bill McMenimen of the appeal board added one item that had not been discussed before in an informative way. The courts of Massachusetts, he said, have in the past year ruled the same way as the Webber Amendment rules, and the lots do not have to have a history of being in one ownership.

Lawrenson was granted his appeal.

Evelyn Leary of Karen Road, Wakefield had a curious case. The lady owns 11,620 square feet of registered land off Fairfield Road. She wants the right to build a home. It was found, during the discussion that she owns another 50 foot strip beside her land. She was advised to go to the building inspector, to see if she had enough land without a variance.

Beverly Street is a paper street near Dorchester Street in west Wilmington. There happens to be another street of the same name. Attorney Joseph Courtney handled the case, one of four cases in the same evening. The lots all qualify under the Webber Amendment, and Courtney agreed to a construction of the street from Dorchester Avenue.

William F. Cavanaugh of Grove Avenue was granted the right to build on a house lot on Carmel street, land which he bought in the annual town meeting. The road is already in, constructed nine years ago. The problem is that there has been water in cellars in the neighborhood.

One neighbor told the appeal board that he has a lot of electronic equipment in his cellar. If Cavanaugh builds, and his cellar gets flooded as a result, he said, he was going to sue.

The last case was also by Attorney Courtney. Some land, between Taft Road and Roosevelt Road, and near Cleveland Avenue, could become seven house lots. The streets would be constructed as demanded, and under the supervision of the town engineer, the appeal board was told. The board granted the case.

For a peaceful weekend

What will happen in Wilmington this weekend? Will Wilmington be on the television screens and front pages across the nation?

Wilmington will be the scene of a demonstration by the New England Campaign to Stop the Euromissiles, a Cambridge-based peace coalition. On Sunday, this group will assemble at Wilmington Common, hold a parade to and from Avco, and then hold a rally on the Common. Another parade will take place on Monday, and non-violent civil disobedience has been advertised on posters.

The right to hold such a parade and rally has been upheld in Federal court, where the town counsel and the town manager have spent two afternoons in the past week facing attorneys for the Civil Liberties Union, in addition to having spent many hours in preparation. And for all the time and effort expended, the only result was frustration and lost time on both sides. It took many hours to agree on some points, and other points were brought home only in the judge's ruling. But permit or no, the demonstrators would demonstrate.

The demonstrators' rights are based on the First Amendment, giving all Americans the right of free speech. Court decisions have drawn this right to include a freedom from "prior constraint" on free speech. Thus, the town cannot prevent the rally or the parade, since they are considered forms of free speech.

The cherished right of free speech contains some ironies. Anyone can exercise it, but few can exercise it well. Quantity and quality do not equate. And in order for it to work, someone has to be listening.

Sometimes people read more into what you do than what you say. The demonstration will be reported much more for the event than the message. Pictures of police and demonstrators certainly are more exciting than any serious reporting of what is being said. The demonstrators know this — the civil disobedience will generate much more publicity than will speeches.

And what of the residents of Wilmington? The selectmen opposed the demonstration, noting that it will infringe on rights of the local residents. This opposition, even though it was overturned in court, can be interpreted as a form of free speech. Yes, the demonstrators received their permit — but it goes on record that the selectmen voiced their objections, and in a forum where the demonstrators had to listen.

But what will the weekend bring? Will there be counter-demonstrators? Arrests?

Wilmington has a reputation of being a frustrating place for demonstrators. The Wilmington police have practiced a policy of not arresting demonstrators. Arrests generate publicity.

Anyone with ideas of demonstrating against the demonstrators ought to think about the bottom line effect of such action. A quiet demonstration generates very little publicity, and publicity is one of the demonstrators' goals.

Wilmington residents, whatever their stand on nuclear weapons, would do well to set a good example for the demonstrators by staying home, giving them a peaceful, quiet message. Isn't peaceful communication one of the first steps to world peace?

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

I am so glad that our town fathers denied a permit to aid civil disobedience.

May I suggest that everyone in town send a dollar for each member of their family to help expenses.

It's time that we begin to stand up against these people. Thoreau spent some time on Walden Pond writing about civil disobedience and Emerson financed him, but thank God he got tired of supporting Thoreau's camping out and enjoying laziness. He cut off his support.

I do not believe that the Civil Liberties Union will do that as it will not support Russia's purpose.

Those who dare to indulge in civil disobedience of this kind should start on Russia. Russia has vowed to destroy us from within. Should they parade in Russia or even voice dissent they would be sent to outer Siberia forever. Should — God forbid — Russia ever take over America they would be the first to be executed. Because they are bold enough to oppose the government.

I speak now of what has actually happened in the recent past.

If they really want to help our country they could begin by parading around the Russia Embassy and oppose what is going on in Afghanistan.

They could oppose Russian presence in Cuba.

They could work to get Jews and dissidents out of Russia.

They could oppose Cubans in Africa: 2500 trained troops.

They could use their might to get justice for children raped and abused. They could fight drugs and drinking; they could stop the Civil Liberties Union opposing every right that non criminals have. I speak here of not being able to lock up people with noticable amounts of drugs in their possession when legally arrested.

It's getting to the point when only criminals have rights.

It's 1984 and George Orwell saw way back there what was going to happen. Black is white and white's another color preferably gray — so you cannot tell the difference.

Back to Avco. Russia had an arsenal in 1948 and they began to undermine the world way back then, but I did not see anyone oppose them. Nor at any time in between.

Where does the money for all this opposition come from now? Why do these people not put their weight where it can be seen — 1) outside the Russian embassies of the world; 2) in the courthouse with the victims; 3) with the police who are opposed by all and Sunday; 4) with children who raped and fearfully abused — and I do not mean parents who rightfully chastise their children, God forbid that we should become Sweden; 5) with Afghanistan — let the world help such oppressed people; 6) with Africa — blacks who are being exterminated as if they were non people while the world closes its eyes.

If you have any feeling at all — if you are not puppets, change things. Our founding fathers would twirl in their graves if they saw what is going on in their name.

Diane Fielding P.S. I lived through the war in Europe and was part of it. I also have a son aged 14 whom I love.

We blame our leaders for war, but in this area we now have the chance to warn Russia that we are a peace loving nation and diatribe apart — we do not want to be burned up. For the love of our children stop Russia from doing what Hitler did.

The Town Crier is a home town paper and this is where it must start because we are the people.

In every war since 1945 Russia has been in there first. We have not lost one. Does that mean nothing to all you who pass by Avco.

163-foot high tech

A 163-foot tower near the intersection of Main and Lowell streets drew negative comments from the Wilmington Board of Selectmen Monday night. The Board of Appeals recently granted a variance for the tower to NYNEX, the telephone company. The tower is part of a new "cellular" mobile telephone system, which will greatly expand the range and availability of mobile phones in cars, as well as a new portable phone. The system involves a grid pattern of antennae such as this one, and many towns have raised objections to having a tower of such height.

Cancer in males is topic of Regional Health Center program

As part of an increasing nationwide effort to reduce the number of deaths from male genitourinary cancers - cancers of the kidney, prostate, bladder, testes and penis - the Regional Health Center in Wilmington will present a free cancer detection program on Tuesday, June 19 from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. by appointment, in conjunction with the Merrimack Valley Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Each participant will be taught the proper method of testicular self examination, and will receive a free examination for detection of genitourinary cancers by a physician who is a board-certified urologist.

Men over 40 years old will be given a rectal exam to screen for cancer of the prostate.

"The high-risk age group for the cancers varies," said Dr.

John S.F. Daly, urologist. "Testicular cancer occurs most frequently in young men age 15 to 35. Prostate cancer, however, is the third highest cause of male cancer deaths between the ages of 55 and 74.

This year, approximately 119,000 American men will develop genitourinary cancer; 45,000 men will die of these diseases, according to the American Cancer Society. Most experts agree, though, that survival figures can be significantly improved through early diagnosis and prompt treatment. This is why the upcoming male genitourinary cancer screening at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington is so vital.

To pre-register for this program, contact Community Health Education at 657-3910.

Tewksbury water level hits low marks

Tewksbury is in its usual summertime predicament. The town might run out of water this weekend. And the threat is serious.

Tewksbury's water ban, it turns out, is very difficult to enforce. It is believed that there are a number of residents who have garden and lawn hoses running all night. And the number of calls to the police reporting apparent violations of the ban keep adding up.

During the night of Saturday, June 9 the water level in the reserve tank near Astle Street was down to 20 feet. The Tewksbury Department of Public Works called Lowell, which is selling water to Tewksbury, and requested a pressure increase. The result was that the tank level was at 32 feet by 10 a.m. Sunday.

Then it dropped down again, even with the extra pressure. By 9 p.m. the level was back to 20 feet.

And, early this week, the town lost another source of water. Well No. 15, at the corner of Whipple Road and Chandler Street has to be "pulled" for repairs. There will be no water from the well for at least a week. Meanwhile, the DPW is making every effort to complete an emergency pipe line at North Billerica Road. Bob Weimar of the firm of Camp, Dresser and McKee told the selectmen last Wednesday that 180 feet of pipe, and a gas pump will be installed, which will contribute 500,000 additional gallons of water a day into town.

Hopefully, Weimar said, the gas pump can be located under the street and be safe from vandals. He also spoke of getting an electric pump, which would have no need of fueling.

Selectman Bill Hallisey hoped for an installation which would last for a couple of years.

The DPW hopes the North Billerica Road pipe will be in use by Friday afternoon. The DPW is also working, as time allows, on making another connection into the Andover water system on Andover Street.

There is one bit of good news. The chairman of the Wilmington Water and Sewer Commissioners has agreed that Wilmington will supply water to Tewksbury in an emergency only.

Life saver

Wilmington firefighter Bill Lopez of Chestnut Street was recently decorated by the Mass. Society of the Sons of the American Revolution (SAR) at a banquet and reception held at the Wayside Inn in Sudbury. The honor was a "Good Citizenship Medal" for Lopez' saving two lives on separate occasions. In each case, a diner was choking on food, and Lopez applied the Heimlich maneuver. Lopez is also one of Wilmington's Good Guys. From left, Raymond Fleck of Norwood, Lopez, and Bernhard Toombs, also of Chestnut Street.

Photo of the Month

American Forests, a magazine published by the American Forestry Association, chose a photograph by Bernhard Toombs of Chestnut Street, Wilmington as its "Photo of the Month" for June, 1984.

Mr. Toombs submitted a marvelously clear shot of the Baldwin Apple Monument on Chestnut street. The picture caption speculates on the stone carver's reasons for depicting the bottom of the apple rather than an upright view and asks whether any reader can supply the answer.

Until viewing Mr. Toombs' photo, at least one life-long resident of Wilmington never noticed that fact before.

Informational meetings

Free informational meetings will be held at the Massachusetts Department of Social Services, 128 Warren St., Lowell on the subject of foster parenting.

The meetings will be held Thursday, June 14, June 21 and June 28, at 5 p.m. Call 452-8970 if interested.

Rev. Coontz turns 99

The Rev. Herbert Coontz, a resident of Wilmington for 25 years, shares a moment with visitor David Feingold at Fairlawn Nursing Home, Lexington. Rev. Coontz recently celebrated his 99th birthday.

Voter Hall of Fame

A rather distinct accomplishment has been mentioned in this week's Tewksbury Council on Aging news. For the benefit of those who may not read that column, it's repeated here:

Al Reardon and Denis DeDeo, both of Tewksbury have recently been inducted into the Massachusetts Voter Hall of Fame. Neither man has missed voting in any election for the past 50 years.

They were presented certificates from Secretary of State Michael Connolly in appreciation of their commitment to the US form of government and its electoral process.

Leslie Nagy

Leslie Nagy of Hopkins Street, Wilmington will enter the Class of 1988 at Stonehill College, North Easton where she has been designated an honors scholar.

Leslie, who graduated from Wilmington High School with the Class of 1984 was selected for Stonehill on the basis of her outstanding high school academic accomplishment, rank in class and college board scores.

Newcomers and Neighbors

The Tewksbury Newcomers and Neighbors Club recently awarded two $500 scholarships to graduating seniors at TMHS. The money for the scholarships was raised by the club's "Ye Olde Country Auction" held each year in March.

In May the group voted to change its name to Neighbors and Newcomers in order to stress the fact that it is open to all Tewksbury residents - not just newcomers.

Installation of new officers will take place on June 14 at the Windsor Mills Restaurant.

Tewksbury's workhorse

Despite a bout with wildness in Saturday's title game, Tewksbury High School senior pitcher Linda Barry was a three year workhorse for coach Donna Tanner. Barry hurled three tournament wins last week.

Luken defends New England title

In a fine display of speed and coming through in the clutch, Tewksbury's Beverly Luken successfully defended her title as the fastest sprinter in New England in last Saturday's blistering heat at Boston College. Beverly took on the top six 100 meter finishers in the state meets of Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island and defeated them all.

Bev's toughest competition came from two Massachusetts girls who finished behind her when she set the new state record the week before. Melody Johnson of North Attleboro and Jackie Smith of Randolph ran time times in their trial heats. Meanwhile, Bev was feeling the adverse effects of having to hurry down to B.C. after getting her diploma at the Tewksbury High School graduation ceremonies. Making the wardrobe change from cap and gown to track uniform is not much of a challenge, but getting ready mentally and physically for top level competition when trying to perform this "double race" has proven very difficult for any athlete who has ever tried it.

When it came time for the 100 meter finals for women however, Bev was ready. Because her opponents were so fast and so determined to beat her, Bev was going to have to run a perfect race to win. And she did. Taking the lead immediately with an explosive start, Bev surged ahead and held off late rushes by Smith and Johnson to lean across the line first.

Retaining her New England title was the caper to a brilliant career for Beverly at Tewksbury High School. In the Merrimack Valley she has been unbeatable in four events - the 100, the 220, the 440 and the long jump. For three years she has been a Merrimack Valley All-Star as well as a member of the Boston Globe all-scholastic track teams. She has won five state championships, two New England championships, and this winter placed third in the Easterns and fifth in the Nationals. She is the only athlete from Tewksbury High School ever to place in a national competition.

Bev leaves behind some very impressive school records. They include: 100 yards- 11.2; 100 meters- 11.9 (state and New England record); 220- 25.9; 440- 59.4; long jump- 16'9"; 100 meter hurdles- 16.6. Those marks will serve as worthy goals for Tewksbury athletes to reach for in the years to come.

Summer track meets

As he has for the past two summers, Tewksbury Memorial High School girls' track coach Bob MacDougall will hold track meets for athletes of all ages at the Tewksbury High School track Thursday evenings. The first meet will start at 6 p.m. Thursday, June 28. The meets will take place every Thursday evening after that until the last meet scheduled for Thursday, August 2.

The events include: 50 yard dash for boys and girls one to five, six to eight and nine to 11; 100 yard dash for boys and girls 6-8, 9-11, 12-14 and 14 and over; 880 yard, 220 yard dash, 440 yard run for the same age groups as above; consolation 50 yard dash for boys and girls 1-5 who did not win the first 50 yard dash and a one mile run for everyone.

All athletes young or old, male or female are invited. Ribbons will be awarded to the winners of each race. A voluntary entry fee will be taken to help cover the cost of the awards.

Last year three meets were well attended and there were some very exciting races. It is a good opportunity for everyone to see how fast they are or to test their stamina in a longer race. The emphasis is on good fun.

Tewksbury football registration

Registration for Tewksbury Youth Football players and cheerleaders will be held Thursday, June 14 from 6 to 9 p.m. and Saturday, June 16, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at St. William's. Children must be accompanied by a parent and must take a copy of their birth certificate. Coaches for the teams and for cheerleaders are needed. Call either Bob Lombardi at 851-7479 or Valerie Rogers at 658-4589 after 4 p.m.

Tewksbury's super seniors

Tewksbury High School's softball seniors went through a lot together in three seasons, qualifying for a trio of tournaments and finally making it all the way to the state final last week under adverse conditions before losing, again under adverse conditions.

It was obvious from the tournament's outset that coach Donna Tanner's girls would be in for a real gut check this time around, bunching four games closely together in one week after rain washed out the opening contest twice.

A comeback win over Woburn was followed by routs of Gr. Lowell and Pope John. For the first time in three tourney appearances, Tewksbury had survived a first game heart-breaker and rolled to the title showdown only to be faced with another true test of stamina and character.

Graduating at 10 a.m. at Lowell's Cawley Stadium in sweltering temperatures Saturday, the seniors had enough time to shift gears from an important academic step to an athletic event that was pretty darn important to anyone who had played on this softball team for three years.

With Chelmsford shirking a postponement of the 5 p.m. game at Belmont (the game was originally scheduled for Wilmington's Town Park), the Redmen played and were out of it after four innings.

The disappointment of the 13-4 final score should have all been wiped out by this team's ability to mow down opponents for three seasons with a slashing batting attack and one pitcher, who despite sudden explosions of wildness, more often than not came up with the big game when it counted most.

For talent and toughness, this Tewksbury team ranks right up there with the best that this state has to offer.

Ninth grade girls show promise

Despite a 3-5 finish this spring, the Tewksbury ninth grade softball girls show definite promise for upcoming seasons. The girls won their first home game over Lawrence, 13-2 behind the solid pitching of Tracy Danner. Danner fanned six and walked two. Tewksbury rapped 14 hits, with Tricia Censullo, Dianne Sanborn, Maggie Arsenault and Debbie Byrne netting two apiece.

Connecting for singles were Jean Sullivan, Jodi Sutherland, Karen Corbett and Tracy Danner. Kelly McNamara hit only once, but it was a three run homer.

The next home game was against Methuen. This time even a seven run fifth inning rally couldn't push the girls ahead and they lost, 14-8.

The girls lost to Wilmington, 8-6 in their first away game. Danner pitched an excellent game, but errors by Tewksbury proved to be the deciding factor in a close game.

The freshmen's next game was at Andover West. The girls could only score five runs despite banging out 12 hits. Leading the offensive drive was Kelly McNamara with a triple and single, two doubles by shortstop Patty Corvello and two singles by Debbie Byrne and co-captain Tricia Censullo.

The girls next traveled to Andover East and posted a 10-4 victory. Repeating at the plate with base hits were Jodi Sutherland, Tricia Nelson, Jean Sullivan, Dianne Sanborn and Debbie Byrne. Sue Kinnon allowed only two walks as the starting pitcher. Tracy Danner relieved her, striking out six and walking three. Fine catches were made by outfielder Maura Looney, shortstop Jean Sullivan and third baseman Tricia Nelson.

The girls' game against Greater Lawrence was cancelled and their next game was at Lawrence. They lost, 16-4. In an error-filled game, Sherry Daniels started pitcher and had one strikeout and one walk. Danner replaced her, fanned four and gave up no walks. Tewksbury's bats were quiet, getting only six hits. One hit was a two run homer by Debbie Byrne, another a triple by catcher Jodi Sutherland, and the singles by Maggie Arsenault, Tricia Censullo, Jean Sullivan and Kelly McNamara.

The girls then traveled to Methuen and lost, 13-9. The Redmen had nine walks and nine hits. Although Tewksbury got some excellent base running by Kelly McNamara, Kelly Byrne, Dianne Sanborn and co-captain Karen Corbett. Tewksbury's fielding was not very good. Methuen capitalized on Tewksbury's mistakes, scoring 13 runs on seven walks, five strikeouts and getting only five hits.

In their final game the girls defeated Wilmington, 9-3. Some excellent defensive plays, combined with good hits and good base running gave Tewksbury the win.

For the third year the junior high teachers played the ninth grade team. The girls beat the teachers this year, 10-8, under the leadership of co-captains Karen Corbett and Tricia Censullo.

Sgrossso Tech Athlete of the Year

Wilmington's Bob Sgrossso was honored as Shawsheen Tech's Male Athlete of the Year at the school's banquet Friday night.

Sgrossso was a key figure in the Tech basketball squad's drive to a tournament berth this past season.

Bruins draft Newhouse

Wilmington's Jim Newhouse was the Boston Bruins' final (12th round, 248th player overall) selection in the recent NHL draft.

Newhouse, a left wing for perennial power Matignon High School, was 18-30-48 in 22 games this past season and is headed for the University of Lowell.

THE CLOCKFOLK OF NEW ENGLAND
Wilmington

Winding holes in clock faces are for different functions of the clock. If a clock does not strike a gong on the hour, it is technically called a timepiece. Timepieces have only one winding hole in the face because they do nothing but tell time. A clock that strikes on the hour has two winding holes, one for time and one for striking. Each time another winding hole is present, another mainspring must be wound to perform its particular function. A clock which plays a melody, such as Westminster chimes every 15 minutes, has a third winding hole for winding the chimes. There is an interesting assortment of exceptions, however.

The Clockfolk recently serviced an old Seth Thomas clock with two winding holes, but no striking was possible. Both mainsprings drove the same gear, allowing the clock to run for 30 days rather than the usual one week between windings. We have also experienced an old grandfather clock which, after winding three holes, required winding a fourth mainspring to chime a full week.

Then there's the tandem wind. This has one winding hole, but winding both the time and the strike mainsprings is done by winding the key one way and then the other, until fully wound.

Next: Can I wind my clock too tight?

recreation calendar

Swimming lessons

There was some confusion during Monday's swimming lesson signups due to the Recreation Department's new telephone number. An additional call-in signup will be held Friday, June 16 from 9 to 11 a.m. The new recreation number is 658-4270.

Summer schedule

The Recreation Department's summer schedule includes the following: Swimming lessons, tiny tots, playground, beach, canoe rental, canoe lessons, Red Sox trips, special needs day camp, Boston Harbor cruise and Quincy Markt visit, teen programs, Hampton Beach, concerts, whitewater rafting, gymnastics, sport clinics, tennis lessons and discount tickets.

For information on the above programs, go to the new Rec Office in the Glen Road Town Hall or call the new rec number, 658-4270.

Concert on the common

The next recreation concert on the common will be Tuesday, June 26 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Providing the tunes that night will be the Chelmsford Community Stage Band. Sponsoring that evening of enjoyment is Charles River Breeding Labs, Rainbow Fuel and the Village Pantry. The West Intermediate School will have an ice cream smorgasboard on the common to help the Scott Braciska Scholarship Fund.

Northmeadow tourney

Northmeadow Racquet and Health Club of Tewksbury is holding New England's largest basketball tournament, the Summer Basketball Clinic Friday, June 15, Saturday, June 16 and Sunday, June 17.

Sponsored by Aubut's Liquors, the tournament is one of the few in New England that offers cash prizes and has attracted 16 teams from as far away as New York.

Spectators are invited to attend, and the final game will be held Sunday, June 17 at 3:30 p.m.

Father Mackin celebrates 45th anniversary

It was on May 22, 1979 that Father Francis W. Mackin of St. Thomas Church announced to the parish that he was to be transferred to St. Margaret's Church in Beverly. The cardinal had appointed Fr. Mackin parish priest of St. Margaret's.

He served 21 years at St. Thomas and the transfer was almost as much of a shock to him as it was to his parishioners. Typically, he joked a little, saying that the cardinal would never have appointed a man who was 68 years old, to head up a parish "a man with one foot in the grave and the other on a banana peel."

Sunday, June 9, the Rev. Francis W. Mackin of St. Margaret's celebrated the 45th anniversary of his ordination. There were about 600 persons at the anniversary mass, of which about 60 were from Wilmington. Most of the Wilmington visitors were St. Thomas parishioners, but at least one couple was from St. Dorothy's Church.

The con-celebrated mass was at a hall in Endicott College, a hall larger than that of the church. It was a very fine occasion near the ocean and in a quiet setting.

Fr. Francis Mackin

Among the con-celebrants was Fr. Paul W. Berube, formerly of St. Thomas and Fr. Mark Dittami of the Carmelite Order, a frequent visitor to Wilmington a few years ago. The Rev. Paul H. Sweeney, another visitor, was also a con-celebrant. There was a total of eight priests participating in the mass with Father Mackin.

The soloist, another former Wilmington resident was James Profiro of Lawrence. He had been serving as a brother at St. Thomas when the Rev. Fr. Mackin was in Wilmington.

The mass was ended with a special papal blessing to Fr. Mackin.

Fr. Francis W. Mackin studied in Rome for six years before becoming an ordained priest. In that time he acquired a broad knowledge of the Italian language, which he speaks what can be described as a "Tuscan" accent.

He was ordained on July 9, 1939, and returned to the United States. He became a chaplain at St. Luke's Hospital in Pittsfield, Mass.

In 1949 Fr. Mackin went to Arkansas, to a little town called Wilson. There he founded a parish, known as Our Lady of the Ozarks. There was a total of 13 families in the parish and there Fr. Mackin served 10 years.

He transferred to Our Lady of the Presentation, Brighton, where he served another 10 years, and then Fr. Mackin was transferred to St. Thomas in Wilmington. The arrival date was Sept. 22, 1958.

His total service in Wilmington was 21 years. It is to Wilmington, he declares, that his heart turns. He has never forgotten his friends, nor, to judge that one out of 10 at his anniversary mass was from Wilmington, can it be said that the people of Wilmington have forgotten him.

Any senior who does not show up for the bus and has not called will be charged the entire cost of the trip per person.

Lunch Wed., Thur., Fri.

The senior lunches will be served at the West Intermediate School Wed., Thur. and Fri. at noon. Those taking part should be on time!

Dance class cancelled

Friday, June 15, the dance class will be cancelled. It will resume the following week at the same time. The dancers are putting together a program of their dancing for Senior Night on the common, July 2.

Arts and crafts

The arts and crafts people will be having a couple of tables on the common Senior Night. There will be articles for sale and beautiful handmade dolls will be raffled off. There will also be a table of pastries.

Anyone who would like to help the arts and crafts make this a successful night, join the sessions on Tuesday and Thursday mornings. They have only three weeks to get ready.

Podiatrist June 29

Unfortunately, the fact that Podiatrist Dr. Leavitt would be at the Center Friday, June 8. For the convenience of seniors, he has agreed to return on Friday, June 29.

Hearing specialist, June 22

Fred, the hearing aid consultant could not keep his appointment on June 1, but has rescheduled for Friday, June 22.

Elimination of doctor office runs

The reason for the podiatrist and the hearing consultant at the center is to alleviate many of the doctor office runs. At the present time 34-45 seniors are being transported each day, many of them to doctors and hospitals outside and in the town

Wilmington police news

During the week ending June 12, Wilmington police responded to 14 alarms, five accidents, nine disturbances and six domestic problems.

Eight arrests and three protective custody detentions were made, medical assistance was given twice and two larcenies were logged.

There were four incidents of suspicious activity, three trespassing complaints, three traffic complaints and three complaints involving trailbikes. One assault and battery was investigated along with two break and entries, two threats, five incidents of vandalism and one holdup.

Arrests

The following people were arrested on motor vehicle default warrants issued as a result of failure to pay traffic fines. Thursday evening Officer Redding arrested James Silver of Shawheen Avenue, Wilmington and Michael Chase of Lexington Street on motor vehicle warrants from Wilmington. Wednesday Officer McCue arrested Manoucher Mesgarzdeh of Eastern Avenue, Lynn on a warrant issued out of Stoughton.

Tuesday evening, Insp. McKenna arrested a Billerica man for attempted rape and indecent assault and battery charges following an intensive investigation by McKenna and Juvenile Officer Robert Spencer. Lawrence T. Bastoni, 33 of Brentham Road, Billerica was bailed for a Wednesday court appearance at which his case was continued for two weeks for his attorney to make an appearance.

Friday evening officers responding to an incident on North Street arrested Walter Guiffre, 40, of Wiser Street charging him with disorderly conduct. Arresting officers were McCue and Peterson.

Early Saturday Officer Pat King arrested Douglas Norman, 21, of Main Street Woburn charging him with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol, endangering and failing to keep right. He was bailed for a Monday court appearance.

Around 6 a.m. Saturday Officer Neville arrested Michael Whalen at the Lynn Police Station on a warrant issued by Woburn District Court.

Sunday morning officers Maureen Matarese and Chris Neville arrested Maurice Beliveau, 9 Jordan Street, Wilmington and charged him with assault by means of a dangerous weapon and possession of a firearm without a license.

Another gun charge resulted Sunday morning after officers investigated a suspicious person on Aldrich Road. Officer Matarese arrested Frank Skinner, 50, of Pines Road, Billerica charging him with possession of a handgun without a license to carry said weapon. He will appear in Woburn District Court Monday.

Tuesday afternoon following an investigation of an incident on Church Street in which a person was struck by a car after a verbal altercation, Officer Jim Cuoco and Sgt. Palmer arrested Mario Mogianesi, 24, of Page Street, Malden. He was charged with assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon - an automobile. He was also charged with leaving the scene of a personal injury accident. He was taken directly to Woburn Court where he was arraigned and his case was continued for two weeks.

Thrift shop purchasing is catching on locally

By JUDITH TORKILDSEN

Back in the days of our forefathers, when someone wanted to make a purchase, oftentimes he exchanged a good he produced for one made by his neighbor.

Today, 200 years later, when someone wants to make a purchase, oftentimes he buys something his neighbor first owned but no longer has need of.

From yard sales to shopping via "bargain" magazines (The Want Advertiser and Bargain Hunter's Guide are two magazines where people can advertise second-hand goods they want to sell), second-hand buying has become not only acceptable, but for some people the only way of doing business.

Thrift shop buying is no different. Whether it be to purchase furniture, clothing, shoes or appliances, more and more people are finding what they want at their local thrift shop.

And with the continuing boom in thrift shop buying, no longer are second hand goods to be found only at the Good Will, Morgan Memorial or Salvation Army stores. Today, an increasing amount of privately owned thrift shops are opening and doing a first rate business in second-hand selling.

For some area thrift shop owners, it's no different.

According to Lori Schmidt of the Burlington Thrift Shop in Burlington, "yes indeed" there is a boom in thrift shop buying today, one she attributes to the boom in yard sale buying.

"The yard sales have triggered a lot of thriftiness in people. People have lost the embarrassment of buying thrifty items. And so the boom of the yard sales triggered a boom in the thrift shops," she said. "It seems like everybody's doing it. It's the 'in' thing," she added.

Schmidt, owner of the 388 Cambridge St. shop, said the economy has something to do with the boom also, but even so, her customers don't necessarily shop there out of need.

"People come to the shop with Lincoln Continentals. It's not necessarily out of necessity. It's just fun to buy something for less and possibly spend the saved money on a vacation or something else," Schmidt said.

Schmidt, who opened her shop eight and a half years ago and sold strictly clothing, today sells a wide variety of goods, including household items, furniture, antiques and toys, as well as clothing.

"All in all, we carry 'olde elegant junkie,'" Schmidt says, spelling out the slogan inscribed on her business cards.

Schmidt says it would be hard to determine the average dollar purchase each customer makes because of the variety she sells, but she does know that on an average day she rings in 50-75 sales.

Like many thrift shops, Schmidt says the people that bring their clothing to her are paid on consignment. For clothing, Schmidt says she pays 50 percent of the selling price. For furniture or any other item, she pays 70 percent of the selling price on any item over $15.

Any good over $15, Schmidt says, she keeps in her shop for three months. Clothing, on the other hand, is kept for six weeks. After four weeks it has already been marked down half price.

Items that are neither sold or nor retrieved by their owners become the property of the thrift shop after a certain amount of time. In the case of clothing, Schmidt says she periodically sorts it out and donates it to the Salvation Army.

"Two weeks ago we gave 20 bags to them," she said.

Schmidt says her customers come from surrounding towns such as Billerica, Bedford and Burlington. Her consignees, however, come from further distances, such as Concord, Arlington, Everett, Wakefield and Chelmsford.

Schmidt, whose store is placed alongside a thrift book store and a thrift bread store, said she believes location has a lot to do with a thrift shop's success. But she says it takes other ingredients as well.

Schmidt has seen other thrift shops come and go and says she believes poor management and lack of enthusiasm had something to do with it.

"It takes much enthusiasm, determination and hard work" to run a thrift shop, she said. "And you have to present new items" to your customer frequently, she added.

Schmidt says she also sees smallness as a problem. Schmidt, who expanded her business several years ago by opening up the basement in her store, said "when you cannot expand, you won't succeed too easily."

But while Schmidt sees expansion as an important factor in success, Roger Stinchfield doesn't. Stinchfield, along with his wife Betty and daughter Ann MacLeod, run Betty's Thrift Shop on Linden Street in Reading.

Betty's was opened by Mrs. Stinchfield, the owner, 10 and a half years ago, and according to Mr. Stinchfield, they've chosen not to expand the business over the years.

"This is enough work for three people," he said.

Stinchfield, like Schmidt, sells a variety of goods, such as jewelry, clothing, paintings, toys and shoes.

Like Schmidt, Stinchfield says it's important to offer new items to the customers on a regular basis.

"We have to keep things moving. People like to see new things," he said.

Stinchfield estimates that about 300 purchases are made at Betty's per week.

Stinchfield said they depend on repeat business at their store. "A lot of customers come every week," he said.

Stinchfield says he, like Schmidt, doesn't necessarily see the poorer people coming to the shop.

"We have a lot of customers come in Cadillacs. We used to have one come up in a Roll's Royce," he said.

But Stinchfield says he does know of times when thrift shop buying has helped someone save money so they could buy something they might not otherwise have been able to afford.

"We had a couple say they wouldn't be able to send their son through college or medical school except for buying at thrift shops," Stinchfield said.

Stinchfield said about two-thirds of the sales made at Betty's are in clothing and about one-third is "bric-a-brac." We call everything else bric-a-brac," he said.

ROVING

I never thought I'd see the day when I'd admit to experiencing a "generation gap," but this week I encountered two of them, reminding me, unfortunately, that I'm not twenty anymore.

The first one took place while I was shopping for some new clothes at the Burlington Mall. I was trying to squeeze in the purchase of a summer sports jacket, a couple of pairs of pants and a pair of shoes all during a single lunch hour. I should've known better. It was during this impossible situation (well, impossible for me) that I bumped into a friend by the name of Shirley who also happened to be browsing along the mall. She was in the company of a female companion, whom Shirley introduced as Karen, and after exchanging the usual amenities, they told me they were checking out bathing suits.

Our conversation was short (they were also in a hurry to get back to work), but somehow we managed to jump around to at least a dozen topics.

You know the type: How's Bill, Shirley? He's fine, busy though with his new job. New job? I

Concert at St. Mary's Church

The Charlotte Choir Boys will present a Father's Day Concert at Saint Mary's Church, 155 Washington Street in Winchester on Sunday evening, June 17 at 7:30 p.m. The 27-member touring choir, from Charlotte, North Carolina, will sing classical, religious, folk and patriotic songs in a variety of languages including English, German, Italian, Latin and Afrikaans. The Choir is directed by John Livingston.

Formed in 1978, the group has performed in 25 states, with this year's tour scheduled to include programs in Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts.

The Charlotte Choir Boys, Inc. is composed of three sections: the touring choir, the town choir and the training choir. Using music as an incentive, members of each division develop skills in sight reading, rhythmic coordination, pitch recognition, historical variation of styles, multi-lingual diction and three- and four-part choral arrangements.

Though the purpose of the Choir is to present music well-prepared, the organization gives its members an opportunity to develop character, building experiences such as self-discipline, poise, leadership skills and the value of group commitment in the preparation of music.

It also offers travel experiences which include historic and cultural enrichment both on the regional level and throughout North America. Every boy entering the choir must spend at least one year in the training choir. Advancement to the next level is dependent upon the child's vocal skill and his ability to get along with peers and adults.

This concert is being sponsored by Saint Mary's Music Forum. A voluntary donation will be received at the door to defray the Choir's travel expenses.

For further information, call James Moritz at 729-0055. The public is cordially invited to attend this special evening of music.

Stoneham firm in top 100

Preston Trucking Company, Inc. which has a local terminal at 95 Maple Street in Stoneham has been named as one of "The 100 Best Companies to Work for in America," a book authored by Robert Levering, Milton Moskowitz, and Michael Katz ($17.95 from Addison-Wesley Publishing Company).

The authors, after compiling a list of superior work places through recommendations of management consultants, headhunters, business school professors, and a host of non-professional sources took to the road crisscrossing the country to interview hundreds of employees of corporate America from mailroom clerks to chief executive officers listening to what they liked and sometimes did not like about their jobs. They poked around company cafeterias, inspected non-traditional work places, and wandered around the state-of-the-arts fitness centers. Ultimately they based their evaluation on how well companies performed on a rigorous five-point rating system of pay, benefits, job security, opportunity for advancement, and ambience.

They found that good pay and strong benefits are top attractions but enlightened management policy plays a larger role, too. The happiest employees are those whose firms believe in making people feel a part of the team or family, encouraging open communication, promoting from within, and reducing distinctions in rank between top management and entry-level workers.

The 30 associates of the Preston terminal in Stoneham said, "we are extremely proud of this honor as we have been striving in recent years to bring about a unified effort within our Company in order to provide our customers with a superior service at a fair price and these efforts have paid tremendous dividends not only to our associates within the Company, but to our stockholders and ultimately our customers."

It's Fair Season

The 1984 fair season has started!

Throughout this season, which started the middle of May and continues until the first of December, home gardeners, as well as commercial growers, exhibit their produce, livestock, canned goods, baked goods, handicrafts and special hobbies for competition and profit at fairs across the state.

There are over 100 of these agricultural fairs including grange, 4-H and youth, livestock and flower shows. The majority of these take place from August to October.

For those interested in attending these fairs, or wishing to compete, the Middlesex County Extension Service is offering a free "Massachusetts Agricultural Fair" listing. This colorful brochure lists all the town and regional fairs being presented in the state this year.

One of the most delightful fairs of the season is the Middlesex County 4-H

Fair, held at the Westford 4-H Fairgrounds, August 24, 25 and 26, 1984.

Write to "Fair Brochure", Middlesex County Extension Service, 105 Everett Street, Concord, Ma. 01742, for a free "Massachusetts Agricultural Fair" listing.

Laura S. Hogan named EMBR "Realtor of Year"

Laura S. Hogan, Principal Owner of Realty World-Schmid, 153 Main Street, Stoneham has been named Realtor of the Year for 1984 by the Eastern Middlesex Board of Realtors. The Board encompasses some seven towns along with adjacent areas and includes some ninety real estate firms with over 400 associates. Nominated by her peers, this selection was made by an independent panel of judges "for outstanding service and contribution to the Real Estate profession and the community". George Riccardelli, Realtor of the Year for 1983, and Chairman of the Nominating Committee presented the award along with Milton Shaw, Executive Vice President of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors who presented a Citation rarely given from the Governor of Massachusetts, Michael Dukakis, and from the House of Representatives for the State of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Hogan established her office in Stoneham some 10 years ago and has received awards for having the outstanding franchise office for Realty World receiving the International Office of the Year in 1980; the Eastern District Franchise office in 1983; an award for second in listing and third in sales for the Realty World New England Region in 1983.

Professionalism in real estate is only a small part of this realtor's activities as in 1983 she designed and conducted a drive "Miles For Smiles" for United Cerebral Palsy with a goal of collection one mile of quarters for the charity. She was named to the V.I.P. Panel on National T.W. during January and has received a nomination as a director of the North Shore United Cerebral Palsy Foundation. Locally she has been active in the Stoneham Square Development Corporation along with other civic projects.

She is presently State Director of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors, Chairman of Professional Standards for the Eastern Middlesex Board of Realtors, and immediate past president of the EMBR. The Award entitles her to competition for the State Realtor of the Year, to be announced in late June.

Independent judges for the event included Mr. William Fay, Principal of the Intermediate School in Wilmington; Bruce Morang, Editor of the Reading Chronicle, and Robert De'Roberto, Director of Y.M.C.A. in Wakefield.

ROVING

didn't know he got a new job. He's selling condominiums now. Karen, are you married, too? No, but I'm thinking about it. You girls both work in the same office?

Then the conversation turned to me, and I responded with the same kind of amiable small talk. I quickly re-directed the conversation back to why we were all at the mall, hinting that I still had to hit Filene's for some pants. I wasn't having very good luck at finding what I wanted, and I said so.

"I'm really bummed out," I said, in a slightly distressed tone of voice. "I was hoping to get everything out of the way this afternoon. But it looks like I'll have to come back later on to finish up."

I noticed Shirley's friend smiling — no, smirking, really — as I spoke. I asked if there was something funny in what I'd said. Or, I inquired, is some of the spinach salad I'd eaten in a mad dash earlier stuck, dried, on my front tooth?

"No," Karen declared, still chuckling, "it's just that I've never heard that before."

I was puzzled. "Never heard what before?"

"Bummed," I've never heard anyone say they were bummed over something before."

Glimpsing at my friend, I found that hard to believe. "You've got to remember," Shirley said thoughtfully, "Karen is only eighteen."

I hadn't thought of Karen as being only eighteen. But then again, after I reached thirty, I never thought of anybody as being eighteen, if you know what I mean.

So I just smiled back at Shirley's friend, and said, with a touch of sardonic wit, "Oh, maybe I should just — how do you say it? — chill out then and not worry about it. Or is it chill down?"

Shirley's friend was a little embarrassed by the whole thing, acting as if Shirley, who is only a few years older chronologically but apparently light years ahead of her in maturity, and I were poking fun at her.

"Don't mind me, Karen," I reassured her. "It's O.K. to be eighteen."

She let me know that she wasn't hurt by my gentle teasing, adding, "And you really should chill out."

My second encounter with a "generation gap" came that Friday evening. This time I was with three other friends, all of us sitting around a tiny table in the Terrace Bar, at the new Marriott Hotel, in Copley Place, trying to decide where to have dinner. While we bantered suggestions around we picked at a plate of nacho chips and salsa sauce.

At one point I excused myself to go to the men's room. "I'll let you people make up your minds while I'm gone."

On my way to the men's room I spotted a familiar face and figure roaming about the second level of the brand spanking new indoor shopping complex. The floor was busy with strollers, so I was able to pause and take another look at this person without appearing conspicuous or arousing his curiosity.

He was an older fellow, perhaps in his mid-sixties, yet in terrific shape and casually but impeccably dressed. He had a very prominent jaw, a jaw that I knew I'd seen many times before.

It didn't take long for me to place this guy. He was none other than Hugh O'Brien, the once-famous tv actor who had filled the screen of my parents' black and white Sylvania television set each week when I was a kid as the hero of the tv series "Wyatt Erp."

I walked up to O'Brien and introduced myself, letting him know, "I grew up idolizing you. You used to sit up there on top of your horse, wearing that black cowboy outfit, hat and six gun. Boy, you were something."

I wasn't sure if it was a six gun or not, and I didn't care. After all, I was only about eight when Hugh O'Brien first rode across my tv screen as Wyatt Erp. All I cared about was, twenty-five years or so later, finally meeting up with this childhood hero of mine.

I had an urge to pretend to draw my own six gun, just to see how he'd react, but I refrained, held back by the fear of perhaps embarrassing myself. I don't think I would have though, because O'Brien was warm, kind and willing. I've interviewed a lot of actors before, I thought, from Frank Converse to Peter Boyle to Jack Lemmon to the best of the Shakespearean thespians, but never have I been so caught up in the aura of a star.

Even if he hasn't done much in the last twenty years, he was still a hero of my childhood days, someone I wanted to grow up to be just like.

Finally, I let him go on his way. He must've been glad to get rid of me, but again I didn't care. He'd made my night.

I dashed back to my friends, who were still pigging out on that plate of nachos and obviously no closer to making a decision. "Guess whom I just ran into?" I asked them excitedly, plunking myself back down in my chair.

They didn't appear overly curious, and in fact, went on chewing, as if waiting for me to drop the name of some mutual friend.

"Hugh O'Brien," I told them, beaming.

I was right: they couldn't have cared less. They went on chomping on those darn nacho chips.

In between swallows, one of them finally looked at me long enough to ask, "Who's Hugh O'Brien? One of those tv reporter friends of yours? I think I've heard his name somewhere."

I suddenly realized — you know the old adage: "Light dawns on Marblehead" — that not one of

Thrift

Another thrift shop, The Second Time Around, was opened four years ago in North Reading by two women, Leona Gallo and Linda Gallagher.

"We call it a consignment shop," Gallo said of their 230 Main St. store, where they sell clothing, sporting goods and a few handmade articles.

Gallo says that while their busy times fluctuate, generally "Tuesday and Saturdays are very busy days."

Gallo, who says the quality of clothing has a lot to do with the success of a thrift shop, says there definitely is a boom in thrift shop buying because "prices of clothing on the outside are astronomical and the average person couldn't afford the prices."

Expansion is something Gallo says would be beneficial for their business. "But we're not able to," she said. But jokingly, she adds, "We're not out to make a killing but it keeps us out of trouble."

Baystate Games

The Bay State Games, Massachusetts' own Olympic-style sports festival, is scheduling regional Try-outs in fourteen sports and amateur athletes of all ages are encouraged to come out and participate. In each of the six regions across the state, a representative team will be chosen to compete in the Bay State Games Finals in Boston, July 13-15.

To enter a regional qualifying event, an athlete must submit an official entry form and a $6 entry fee. Deadlines are fast approaching for entry applications in Track & Field, Gymnastics, and Volleyball. To obtain an entry form, call the Bay State Games at (617) 727-3227 or (617) 727-4506.

The Bay State Games is a non-profit organization established by the Governor's Committee on Physical Fitness and Sports to promote the development of amateur athletics in Massachusetts. Toward this goal, various regional events are being held throughout the summer, culminating in the Olympic-style Finals in Boston. Competitions will be held in Basketball, Soccer, Swimming, Diving, Synchronized Swimming, Rowing, Cycling, Track & Field, Gymnastics, Wrestling, Weightlifting, Road Racing, Volleyball and Board-sailing.

Animal Rescue League

Adopt A Cat Month

June is Adopt-A-Cat Month at the Animal Rescue League of Boston and at nearly 700 shelters nationwide. Adopt-A-Cat Month is sponsored by the American Humane Association to focus on the need of owners for the thousands of homeless cats.

The kind young girl pictured has just picked out a furry feline friend to help it forget its days of being unwanted and unloved.

Anytime is a good time to adopt a cat, but spring is the peak breeding season for cats resulting in large numbers of homeless kittens being brought into shelters. Many adult cats are also available for adoption.

Cats of all colors and sizes deserve good homes. Let the League help you find a purr-fect friend. Cat owners need to provide regular feeding, grooming and attention to the health and happiness of their pets. The League suggests that unwanted kittens can be avoided by spaying or neutering your cats.

Visit the adoption center at the League on the corner of Arlington and Tremont streets, Monday-Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, call 426-9170.

the three of them was even close to being over thirty, and that they probably had no idea as to who Wyatt Erp was, let alone the guy who played him on television for years. I decided not to pursue it, dipping a chip into the salsa instead.

"He's just somebody I used to worship when I was a kid," I said, stuffing the chip into my mouth, making every effort possible not to let any salsa drip onto my new pants.

They regarded me rather strangely, but didn't seem to care to hear about it, so we turned our attention back to where we were going to have dinner that night.

SCIENCE MUSEUM

Native Americans used them for everything — for food and beverages, for containers and tools, for medicine and for jewelry. They fashioned them into clothing, used them for shelter, and burned them for fuel. Ever resourceful, they shaped them into musical instruments, gathered them into hair brushes, and even wove them into diapers.

Wherever they lived — woodlands, plains, desert, mountains or coastal area — Native Americans had a thorough knowledge of the plants in their environment. From centuries of experience, they knew how to make practical use of every part of a plant, from leaf to root.

In a new exhibit at the Museum of Science, visitors can see some of the many different ways Native Americans have traditionally used plants and herbs.

"Native Harvests — Plants in American Indian Life" features

over 80 objects hand-crafted from plants, gathered from tribes all over the United States. Of the baskets, jewelry, dolls and other items on display, many are historic, with some dating back more than 700 years! Others are contemporary, made by 20th century craftsmen dedicated to preserving the ancient traditions.

In addition to the craft goods, the exhibition includes photographs, botanical drawings, and actual specimens of some of the source plants. The exhibit, which is being circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service, will be on display in the Design Around Us gallery at the Museum of Science through October 9.

Students honored at award night at Austin

Austin Preparatory School of Reading recently held its twenty-first annual Awards Night Program. This is a formal occasion sponsored by the Friends of Austin to pay tribute to students for their participation in the life of the school, and to honor students for outstanding achievements in academics and activities.

Prior to the Awards Ceremony many students and their families attended a Mass of Thanksgiving in the school chapel. Director of Student Activities Mr. George M. Miller opened the evening with a brief address to the assembly of faculty members, students, parents, and friends. He spoke of the role played by both human and divine love in sustaining the Austin community.

Among the highlights of the evening was the presentation of the William J. Hickey Jr. Memorial Good Sportsmanship Award, which was presented to Joseph Leahy of Reading. The presentation was made by last year's recipient, Mark Connolly, who is currently a student at Holy Cross. Leahy also received a Math Club Award, Omega Award, and a Presidential Academic Fitness Award.

The Charles L. Luciano Unsung Student Loyalty Award went to Kevin Miller of Billerica, who also received awards for Blackfriars, the school newspaper and yearbook, Russian Olympiada, Presidential Academic Fitness, and the Student Council.

The Middlesex County Bar Association Citizenship Award was presented to Richard Conron of Andover. Kenneth See of Wakefield was named the Student Athlete of the year, and the All-Around Athlete Award was shared by Edward Geary of Tewksbury and Steven Schmitt of Wilmington. The following local residents were honored:

Securing home for vacation

Summer is a time for family vacations and outings to the beach or the mountains. However, for burglars it's an opportunity to pay a visit to an unoccupied home. According to FBI statistics the number of burglary offenses increases sharply during the summer vacation period.

Before leaving on a trip, Nancy Golonka, vice president of consumer affairs for the Insurance Information Institute, says take the time to make sure your home is secure.

The Institute's brochure, "Home Security Basics", offers suggestions on how to prevent your home or apartment from becoming an easy mark for thieves.

When you and the family are going to be away from home — whether it's for a day, a week, or longer — ask a neighbor to keep an eye on your property for you and report trespassers to the police.

"Take the time to 'case' your house or apartment, just as a burglar would," says Golonka. "Leave window shades up and keep a radio playing all day to give the impression there is someone at home."

There are ways to make it tougher for a burglar to drop in such as equipping doors with dead-bolt or double cylinder locks.

It pays to make sure valuables such as a painting, a silver collection or an antique chair aren't easy to see from the outside. Collect cash and jewelry and put them in a safe deposit box.

If there should be signs of a burglary when you return home, don't enter or stay in your home. Call the police from a neighbor's house and wait until they arrive.

For a free copy of the Institute's "Home Security Basics" brochure, call toll-free, 1-800-632-8074. Or write, to the Insurance Information Institute, 44 School Street, Suite 802, Boston, Ma. 02108.

TRIVIA

Seedlings are growing six times faster than the normal rate in a special chamber operated by a Minnesota reforestation project, reports National Wildlife magazine. By placing paper birch and white spruce seedlings under 1,000-watt arc lamps, the state project produces six-inch trees in about four months, compared to two years required in a nursery.

The Chesapeake Bay produces 33 percent of the U.S. oyster catch and 50 percent of the nation's tasty blue crabs, says the National Wildlife Federation. Unfortunately, the bay's recent oyster catches of about one million pounds are only a third of the averages of 30 years ago.

Carl Ogren elected president of Protestant Chaplaincy Council

Mr. Carl Ogren, of the Centre Congregational Church of Lynnfield, was elected president of the Protestant Chaplaincy Council, Inc. at their recent annual meeting held at the Melrose Highlands Congregational Church. Delegates to the Council are members from churches in Melrose, Stoneham, Wakefield, Reading, Saugus and Lynnfield. Other officers elected are: Exec. Asst., Richard Greene, Melrose Highlands Congregational Church; Treasurer, Marylen Leving, Melrose Highlands Congregational Church; Publicity, Norman Richardson, First Baptist Church of Melrose; Coordinator of Committees, Clifford Luke, First Baptist Church of Melrose; and Resource Development, Edward Schmidgall, First Parish Congregation of Wakefield. In addition to officer's and auditor's reports, the Council assessed the work of the

Chaplaincy Program during the past year and projected the emphasis of the Council and the tasks to be accomplished for the fiscal year 1984-85. The Council members were pleased to note that several new churches have sent contributions to the program, as well as receiving continued support, of the Protestant Chaplaincy Program at the Melrose-

Wakefield Hospital, by churches who are already members of the Council. The Council is funded entirely by money received from churches in the Melrose-Wakefield area and by contributions from interested individuals. Contributions are always welcomed and can be mailed to the Protestant Chaplaincy Council, Inc., Box 23, Melrose, Ma. 02176.

POWs register for compensation

Thesee Veterans Administration is reminding former prisoners of war that a law enacted in 1981 broadened the agency's authority to provide health care for ex-POWs and liberalized rules for determining whether compensation can be perience. A former POW who is now disabled by one of these conditions may qualify under the law for VA disability payments without the need for additional proof. It will be presumed, in the cases of former POWs, that the conditions originated in, or were aggravated by, military service.

"A recent law added dysthymic disorder (depressive neurosis) to a list of such diseases which already included chronic dysentery, helminthiasis, nutritional deficiency (such as beriberi, pellagra), psychosis, and any of the anxiety states including post traumatic stress disorder," John J. McNiff, director of the Boston VA Regional Office said.

Any former POW who was detained or interned for 30 days or more, and who became disabled by one of these conditions at any time after his military service, will be presumed to have incurred the condition during his military service unless there is evidence of some other cause, McNiff added.

Va Administrator Harry N. Walters urges all former POWs in Massachusetts to register with the VA regional office in Boston. Information on disability compensation and other benefits, including medical and dental care, will be provided along with assistance in applying.

Audubon urges caution in use of pesticides

The Massachusetts Audubon Society, in an effort to help the Commonwealth's towns and cities make responsible plans for mosquito control, today urged that pesticides only be used in cases of a bonafide health emergency. "We support the efforts of the Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Health to carefully determine whether a mosquito borne disease like Eastern Equine Encephalitis poses an immediate and serious risk before declaring that widespread spraying is necessary," said Dan Greenbaum, Director of Education and Public Policy for the Society. "But we are concerned that some of the Mosquito Control Districts those directly responsible for spraying are too quick to use pesticides in their daily mosquito control activities. The routine spraying of broad spectrum pesticides for nuisance mosquito control poses greater health and environmental risks than the mosquito nuisance," he added.

Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) is one of a group of horse-borne viruses found in the United States. Though discovered in horses, EEE occurs most commonly in birds, and is transmitted to humans by mosquitos. It is a very rare disease — since 1938, only 65 human cases have occurred in Massachusetts — but it is fatal in about 55 percent of its human victims. EEE is found primarily in eastern Massachusetts within Route 495 and north of the Cape Cod Canal. In the past, it has generally occurred in three-year cycles.

During 1983, the second year of the current cycle, six cases were identified in the Commonwealth. The Mass. Department of Public Health determined that a significant threat to the public health existed and ordered that pesticide application could occur even on private land where the owner had requested to be excluded from routine mosquito control pesticide application.

As part of its policy, Mass. Audubon has systematically requested and received exclusion from spraying of its 12,000 acres of conservation land. However, last year Mass. Audubon agreed to a limited waiver of these exclusions in Norfolk and Plymouth counties, where the Department of Public Health had determined that EEE posed a bonafide threat to public health.

Massachusetts Audubon has a long-standing concern that indiscriminate pesticide application is a serious threat to environmental and public health. Starting with DDT, which nearly decimated the peregrine falcon, brown pelican and other species, right through to present day pesticide treats to ground and surface water supplies, Mass. Audubon has sought to limit the use of pesticides to situations where a direct threat to public health exists.

Massachusetts Audubon has published an EEE fact sheet, summarizing the history of the issue and the Society's position. Copies may be obtained by writing to: Public Information Office, Massachusetts Audubon Society, Lincoln, Ma. 01773 or

ON TOUR — Gina Caiazzo of Wakefield and Philip Daly of Reading are both members of the New England Youth Chamber Orchestra which will tour Poland, Austria and Germany for three weeks. Caiazzo, 18, is the daughter of Linda Jean Caiazzo. Daly is a Reading Senior and the son of John L. and Mary Daly. Both musicians have been in the All-State band and have been involved for several years with the orchestra.

Refrigerators largest consumers of electricity

Despite the fact that today's refrigerators are more energy-efficient than ever, they're still the largest consumers of electricity of all the major appliances you have in your home, and with good reason — they operate 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Even though they're 31 percent more energy-efficient than those of 10 years ago, there are some things you can do to further reduce your refrigerator's cost of operation, according to Janet K. Felmeth, director of the White-Westinghouse-Kelvinator Appliance Company Home Economics Institute.

"First," she said, "be sure you locate your refrigerator in the coolest area of the kitchen, away from heat-producing appliances such as a range, oven or dishwasher."

"Since proper air circulation is essential to efficient refrigerator operation, you should also allow 3" of clearance at the top of the unit, and at least 1" at the rear," she added.

Because a clean refrigerator operates more efficiently, it's best to vacuum the dust from the condenser coils or condenser clean-out areas at least twice a year, Ms. Felmeth noted.

"Refrigerators operate most efficiently when filled to the correct capacity, but don't overcrowd them," she said.

"Shelves of non-automatic defrost refrigerators should not be lined with aluminum foil, wax paper or paper toweling. If the refrigerator is frost-free, nothing should be stored directly in front of the cold air ducts because it could interfere with the cold air circulation, making the unit operate less efficiently."

Ms. Felmeth offered these hints for additional energy savings:

Check the refrigerator and freezer door gaskets occasionally. If they are worn, dirty, cracked or fit poorly, your refrigerator will operate longer to maintain the desired temperature.

Remove as many items as possible during one door opening. An organized refrigerator will reduce or eliminate energy waste due to costly "searching time."

In frost-free refrigerators, keep foods covered to reduce moisture loss into the refrigerator which contributes to frost formation.

Before going on vacation, try to use all the food in the refrigerator and then turn the temperature dials to a warmer setting.

Cool hot foods before putting them in the refrigerator, but remember to refrigerate or freeze cooled items as soon as possible to prevent spoilage.

Richard Hall honored for years of service

LYNNFIELD — A man's 31 years of dedicated service to the town of Lynnfield and its school-age youngsters will be recognized in June at a public reception honoring retiring Summer Street principal George Caswell.

Arrangements have been completed for a public reception being held Wednesday, June 13, from 3 to 6 p.m. in Richard Hall at the Centre Congregational Church. Reservations must be made no later than June 1.

After graduating from Newburyport High in 1942, Mr. Caswell then joined the U.S. Army, serving in the Tank Corps in the Pacific Theatre of Operations. After his military service he worked for several years in the Towle Silver Co. of Newburyport. In 1948 he entered Boston University and graduated in 1953.

He joined the Lynnfield school system in 1953, working as a fifth grade teacher in the former South School. In 1956 he was appointed assistant principal of the then new Summer Street School, and later filled the dual role as principal of both the former Center School and the Summer Street School.

Mr. Caswell earned a master's degree from Boston University in 1956 and has completed more than 30 hours of graduate work at Northeastern University, Salem State College and Boston University.

"I believe I'm still too young to fully retire," Caswell said, "so I am considering going back into the classroom as an elementary school teacher. I really enjoy working directly with children in kindergarten through Grade 8 and as a classroom teacher this can be accomplished without all the pressures of an administrator."

He further said, "My present plans are to relocate to Newport News, Virginia, where I understand there are teaching opportunities. I am looking forward to getting back to teaching my own class."

According to Caswell, "It's difficult these days for a school principal to be as effective as in the past. It seems a principal is caught in the middle of different forces and the assignment is a difficult one. Nevertheless, I'll sorely miss working with the Summer Street School staff, our highly efficient administrators and, of course, the kids and their parents."

Mr. Caswell continued by saying, "I feel good about retiring on a high note. This past year has been one of my best years in education. Lots of things have come into place — a smooth school and district wide climate, assertive discipline, and communication between teachers and principal at an all time high."

Alfred Hitchcock

Murder, strangulation, poison. An innocent man presumed guilty. Cool, tall blondes, beakers of brandy and mental aberrations. No, these are not a neurotic's nightmare, but simple themes. Themes which consistently run throughout the films of Alfred Hitchcock.

Five of Hitchcock's films are recently being re-released across the country. The last of these films, "Rope," shot in innovative ten minute takes, will be opening in the Boston area on June 15.

Hitchcock, the British director who died in 1980, often carried his privately harbored fears and obsessions over to his films. According to Donald Spoto's biography, "The Dark Side of Genius," he was a man preoccupied with food, alcohol, unattainable women and a lifelong fear of authority stemming from a childhood incident.

Such a fear of authority is present in the British thriller, "The Thirty-Nine Steps." Authority, in this case Scotland Yard, represents to an innocent Robert Donat his apprehension for the murder of a mysterious woman which he did not commit.

"The Thirty-Nine Steps" is also a prime example of an ordinary person suddenly thrown into a wild and uncontrollable situation. This is perhaps one of Hitchcock's more popular storylines, as he used it to create suspense in surroundings which would ordinarily elicit dreariness. Think of how many people lock their bathroom doors before taking a shower, thanks to "Psycho."

It was Hitchcock's working class upbringing that never allowed him to feel comfortable with Britain's upper crust, and eventually lead to his taking American citizenship. It was perhaps for this same reason that most of his work deals with middle class people and ideals which are readily identifiable to his audiences.

Hitchcock's 1956 remake of his own 1936 version of "The Man Who Knew Too Much" stresses an innocent man's terror and his wife's trauma while in a familiar setting. Then there is "Dial M for Murder," "Rear Window," and "The Birds." The list is endless of what Hitchcock could do with banal settings and with commonplace people.

Strangulation and poison are favorite Hitchcockian methods of murder. But, it is poison as the modus operandi that elicits the most suspense. Ingrid Bergman is slowly, painfully poisoned by her ex-Nazi husband Claude Rains in "Notorious," and she later has a "Suspicion" that Cary Grant has poison on the brain. "Suspicion" contains one of the director's tenser scenes, as Grant carries a potentially lethal glass of milk up a shadowy staircase to Bergman. To focus on the glass, Hitchcock illuminated it by placing a light directly into the milk, so that it is all the viewer could do to tear his eyes away from it.

Although Hitchcock did favor average characters in his films, he eventually focused on persons who were mentally unstable. "Psycho," "Marnie," "Vertigo," "Strangers on a Train," and "Spellbound," all deal directly with psychosis and trauma. "Spellbound" contains the most clinical rendering of this theme, and Hitchcock even went too far as to employ surrealist painter Salvador Dali to help him construct a bizarre dream sequence of Gregory Peck's.

Many less obvious themes are present throughout Hitchcock's work. He established a penchant for blonde actresses early, while directing silent movies in England and continental Europe (but married a brunette named Alma Reville at the same time.) This preference eventually developed into an obsession for icy blondes who could have been interchanged from one picture to the next.

Hitchcock directed a film that dealt with a Jack the Ripper type of murderer obsessed with blondes in 1926 called "The Lodger: A Story of the London Fog." A silent film, Hitchcock considered it important, as it was the first time in which he could exercise his own style. "The Lodger" is also the first film in which Hitchcock appeared, and he did so because of logistics. There weren't enough extras and he had to fill the screen. When "The Lodger" was a success, he continued this practice out of superstition and then as a gag. However, in 1967 Hitchcock told French director Francois Truffaut that his practice had become troublesome, and he was careful to show up within the first five minutes of the movie so that the audience could view the rest of the film without distraction.

Two other minor themes that Hitchcock employed in most of his television and wide-screen productions were food and liquor. The example which springs readily to mind is the television play "Lamb to the Slaughter," in which Barbara Bel Geddes clubs her husband to death with a frozen leg of lamb, and then serves the cooked roast to investigating police. This play, written by Roald Dahl, is a typical Hitchcockian fantasy about the relationship between food and violent death.

All of these themes, interesting as they may be, are still only secondary tools used with MacGuffins (Hitchcock's term for plot devices), humor, suspense and absolute authenticity to create entertainment. Hitchcock said it best in the book "Truffaut's Hitchcock."

"Making a film means, first of all, to tell a story. That story can be an improbable one, but it should never be banal. It must be dramatic and human. What is drama, after all, but life with the dull bits cut out."

20,000 die from falling accidents

Most people know that traffic accidents are the number one cause of accidental death but are unaware that falls are the second most common cause. Each year approximately 20,000 people die from injuries received from falls and about 400,000 people are injured. Statistics also show that more people die in falls at home than at work.

The elderly are the age group that are most seriously affected by falls. A fall for an older person can have very serious results. Everyone can help themselves avoid falls by keeping an eye out for hazards and by taking a few precautionary measures as follows:

—Stairways should be well lit with handrails or enclosures on both sides.

—Never use stairways for storage.

—Pick things up off the floor; don't just walk over or around them.

—Make sure scaffolding is solid, level and free from tangled ropes and loose tools.

—Wear proper footwear and walk carefully when surfaces are covered with water, snow or ice.

—Install handrails and non-skid materials in bathtub areas.

—Be extra careful in moving around after waking up from a deep sleep.

—Pick up, fasten down, or move any items such as toys, loose carpeting or extension cords that someone might trip over.

—When using a ladder, be sure to check the ladder for stability; to climb and work facing the ladder; to keep the soles of your shoes free from grease, oil and mud; to not reach too far out while working on the ladder.

—Keep your work area neat and clean.

—Be aware that factors such as fatigue, emotional stress, illness or other physical conditions may affect your stability and lead to falls.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

By ANTHONY MANCONI

This past week has been a "Banner" one indeed. I bought a new flag to fly on the Fourth of July, my old one is getting a little tattered and torn — it has thirteen stars — I paid for it by check and I asked the clerk if I needed any identification. "It isn't necessary sir," she replied, "people who buy flags don't give out bad checks." I also met or was told about these wonderful readers of Woodchips, Shelly Murphy of Reading who works in Graphic Arts and her sisters, Ann, a biologist and Linda, in Health Physics for New England Nuclear.

I admire women in the sciences mostly because I flunked high school chemistry. Miss Sullivan asked me if I knew anything about "Nitrates." I stood up, stammered and hesitated, then said, "All I know Miss Sullivan is that they are a lot cheaper than 'Day rates.'" "OK you got that wrong, while you're standing, describe a 'Vacuum'." I knew I was finished with the course when I said, "I have it in my head but I can't describe it." It was because of answers like that that I became a carpenter.

I heard from Tom Jordan of Reading who is a home building contractor. He told me he and his crew were rebuilding a roof when one of the men fell off the edge of the roof. Tom said that he wasn't at all surprised because he knew when he hired him that he looked like an "Eaves Dropper."

I spoke to Mike Minghella who with his brother Phil are expert locksmiths. He told me ghosts never have any problem getting into a locked room because they all have "Skeleton Keys." I know a locksmith whose children are on the gym team at Woburn High as "Tumbler's." Tom and Carrie Mooney of Winchester never worry about the security of their house with their great big Labrador Retriever Holly in the house. Why only yesterday, Holly heard a strange noise and made a "Bolt" for the door. This, I was told at the locksmith course at Yale) the door to success is opened with the key of knowledge.

Dreams of the future are better than the history of the past. When Father John Mericantante of St. Charles Church in Woburn was assigned to my parish church, I painted a wall for him. I put a little too much water in the latex paint I was using so the job didn't come out so hot. Father John looked at the wall then pointed at me and said, "Repaint you Thinner, Repaint!"

Louise Fenner is an editor for a FDA publication. While visiting in Winchester, she read a Woodchip column, and because it reminded her of her hometown she has asked me to send a copy regularly. I certainly will, Louise.

George Nicholson of Winchester pulled this one on me, (I think it's great). George asked me to place my hand on the window of his office door. I did, and he then asked with a wry smile on his kisser, "Wood-chipper, do you feel the pane?" I then tried it on several people. Folks, some of the answers I got are, to say the least "Un-printable."

No one ever climbed a mountain by looking at it and you can't discover any new oceans unless you have the courage to lose sight of the shore.

I predict a bright future for my friend, young Michael Curran of Woburn. He is in electronic research, where he'll help "transform" the industry to its greatest "potential." Michael is a "live-wire" who is "positive" that his ideas in the "Electronic Field" will be "transmitted" all over three worlds.

An experiment with a firefly to find out how it "generates" light and "power" (sad to say) "short circuited" when the firefly accidentally backed into a laboratory fan and exclaimed, "Delighted!"

No end folks. I think I'll switch to another subject. I congratulate Janice and Jerry Levine of Winchester on their recent marriage. I don't particularly like to attend weddings. I didn't even want to go to mine. I was invited to a wedding last week, it was a Nudist wedding. I didn't go, I didn't have a thing to wear. My wife told me today that at least thirty Fools had proposed marriage to her. "Well," I asked, "why the heck didn't you marry one of them?" She looked at me and smiled and then said, "I did!"

Hi, Donna Monahan, Stoneham Independent Reporter. I know you read this column and I want you to know I read yours too.

Susan Carroll has the face, form and figure of a potential Miss America. She makes many a young blade's head turn as she walks by. Even though I have a gray hair or two I don't mind looking at a beautiful young lady myself, after all just because there's a little snow on the roof, that doesn't mean the fire in the furnace is out!

My wife has the frame of a French creation, the Eiffel Tower. Others may equal it, but nobody can top the beauty of the Swedish ladies. Their beauty is not only external but what is far more important they possess the inner calm, peace and tranquility that is know as Charisma. It is my pleasure to know many of them like, Karla Linquist, Ruth Haggerty and Katrina Jacobson.

Dan Hogan, my friendly firefighter in Woburn, received so many complimentary calls the last time his name was mentioned that I thought I'd tell you that I know Dan will climb the ladder and become a Lieutenant some day. Bill McCall asked Dan why he was wearing red suspenders? Well Dan came right back with "to hold my pants up of course."

I had the pleasure of talking to Betty Spahl of the Wilmington Town Crier office. Thank you Mr. Fred Nielson for sending me a copy of the Town Crier. I wish other area papers would follow suit so that I can learn more about your wonderful people and write about them.

A woman called the newspaper and inquired about the cost of a funeral notice for her departed husband. "Fifty cents an inch," responded the editor. "Oh my gracious," she exclaimed, "that will be awful expensive, you see he was well over six feet tall." The crew members of the "Old Ironsides" are picked for their strong "Constitution."

Do you really know your medical rights?

By William Pacino

We are always talking about demanding our rights but do we really know what our rights are? Do you know for sure which legal actions are under your control . . . and which are beyond it?

Test your knowledge of medical matters through this short quiz. The questions are based on current law, and in part on information from two sources sponsored by the American Civil Liberties Union: "The Rights of the Critically Ill" by John Robertson (Bantam Books, 1983) and "The Rights of Hospital Patients," by George Annas (Avon Books, 1975).

The People's Medical Society Newsletter, published by the People's Medical Society, a nonprofit, tax-exempt organization, based at 14 East Minor Street, Emmaus, Pa. 18049, printed this questionnaire in their April 1984 issue.

True or false?

1. There is a legal right to health care in the United States?

False Neither the Constitution nor the Declaration of Independence guarantees this right. There is no legal right to demand medical care.

2. A doctor can lie to a patient about the seriousness of an illness if the doctor thinks it will spare the patient anxiety and grief.

False A doctor is obligated, under all circumstances, to tell a patient his/her diagnosis and prognosis. If the doctor fails to do so, he/she can be sued for malpractice. If the patient has specifically expressed a desire to know his/her diagnosis and prognosis, and the doctor does tell him/her, it can be construed as a breach of contract. And, if the doctor keeps back information that ultimately obstructs crucial medical, financial or personal decisions on the part of the patient, then the doctor could be held liable for the damages that result.

There are two instances where the doctor is off the legal hook: if the patient has specifically expressed a desire not to know, and if the doctor reasonably believes that bad news could do real harm to the patient (known as "therapeutic privilege").

3. A patient can override objections by the family and can demand to be told the nature of his/her illness.

True If the patient is competent, the family has no right to have information relevant to the person's medical condition withheld from him or her.

4. A patient has the legal right to keep his/her illness a secret from the family.

True A patient can ask that his or her condition be kept secret, and doctor has to go along. That's part of what doctor-patient confidentiality is all about. Exceptions might include cases in which the release of information about a patient's condition is important to protect others from contracting the disease or if other harm could occur.

5. The family has the legal right to stop treatment of a competent, critically ill family member, even if the patient wants it continued.

False If the ill person is (and this is important) competent and also has the money to pay for treatments, the family has no legal power to stop it. The doctor's duty is to the ill person, not to family members. In terminal cases, the law is fuzzier. The patient has the right to treatment that will prolong life even a few days, but this right might not extend to include continued maximum treatment if he or she is in a comatose or unconscious state.

6. A cancer patient has a right to have his/her doctor prescribe or administer laetrile.

False Even in states where laetrile is legal, doctors are not obligated to use it. Writes Robertson: "Since laetrile has not been shown to be effective, a doctor who refuses to prescribe it would not be violating his duty to provide the patient with effective medical care. If the patient objects, the patient is free to terminate the relationship and seek care elsewhere."

7. A competent adult can refuse medical care that could keep him/her alive.

True According to some rulings, rejection of lifesaving treatment is protected by the constitutional guarantee of right of privacy. There would have to be some pretty good reason for interfering with this right.

8. A patient can sue a doctor who treats him/her against his/her will, in order to keep him/her alive.

True Despite a doctor's seeming good intentions or ethical concerns, he or she can be sued for battery, false imprisonment or lack of informed consent. The doctor could even end up being responsible for the cost of care. A patient can also get a court order, if necessary, to force a doctor to stop treatment on penalty of contempt of court.

9. A patient can be thrown out of a hospital if he/she can not pay.

False Once a person has been admitted and needs continued care, the hospital probably can not discharge him or her. The hospital could have the person transferred to another hospital, but only if the patient were in stable enough condition to be moved. If the patient is discharged because he or she can not pay, and then gets worse or incurs further damage, he or she could sue, claiming abandonment.

10. A doctor can (a) refuse to treat a patient who can not pay, (b) stop treating a patient who can not pay.

(a) True (b) False Writes Robertson: "Although not obligated to begin treatment, once this undertaken, the doctor is obligated to continue as long as the patient will benefit or until the patient withdraws." Otherwise, abandonment can be claimed, and a civil suit could follow. However, if the doctor has made clear at the start of treatment that ability to pay is a condition of continuing care, he or she can cut off treatment.

10. If, in an emergency situation, a person is brought to a hospital that does not have an emergency room, the hospital has an obligation to take in and care for the person anyway. False In most states there is no legal obligation to do so, and a severely injured person could, within the law, be turned away. Some states have laws requiring hospitals to have emergency rooms. In these places, and in all situations where a hospital has an emergency room, that emergency room cannot turn away a person brought to it in an emergency state.

12. A hospital can prevent a patient from leaving.

False If the person is of sound mind, he or she can leave at any time, and the hospital can not do anything about it or risk a suit for false imprisonment. And this applies even if the person has not paid his/her bill, or the bill of his/her child. A person may be asked to sign a "discharge against medical advice" form, but there is no legal obligation for the person to do so in order to leave the hospital.

13. A doctor must refer a patient to a specialist or seek consultation if the patient requests it.

True This is not a law, but good practice. It is also a portion of the American Medical Association's Principles of Medical Ethics. And, if the doctor refuses a patient's request for a referral or consultation, and it turns out the doctor's reassurance of proper treatment is wrong, a negligence suit is probably the patient's next (and successful) step.

14. A doctor can refuse to continue to see a patient without first obtaining the services of another doctor to the patient.

False The only way a doctor-patient relationship ends is if (a) both parties agree to its end, (b) if it is ended by the patient, (c) if the doctor is no longer needed, or (d) if the doctor withdraws from the case after having given reasonable notice. Otherwise, a case for abandonment can be made by the patient.

15. A hospital patient has the right to refuse to be examined by medical students, interns or residents.

True Writes Annas: "All patients have a right to refuse to be examined by anyone in a hospital setting." In addition, fraud can be claimed if consent for an examination was given when a medical student was introduced as "doctor" to patient, and patient believed him/her to be a doctor.

TIDBITS

A single drop of Australian tiger snake venom contains enough poison to kill 25 people, reports National Wildlife magazine. Fortunately, this medium-sized snake normally uses its toxin only to kill small frogs.

Nine British soldiers are studying cold-related physical and psychological problems by spending most of 1984 living in tents and holes in the Antarctic, reports International Wildlife magazine. They won't have much company. The largest land animal on Antarctica is only a quarter of an inch long, states Ranger Rick magazine. It's a tiny wingless fly. The largest animals of the Antarctic, seals, penguins and whales, spend most of their time in the water.

V.A. question

Q. — I have been advised that I have a VA educational overpayment. I do not have the money at this time to pay it all back. What can I do?

A. — If you are returning to school in the next 45 days, you may request that the VA withhold your overpayment from the funds due you at that time; otherwise, you should set up arrangements to pay back the money in monthly installments.

Q. — May I obtain a small business loan through the VA?

A. — The Small Business Administration offers a number of programs designed to help foster and encourage small business enterprises. In 1983, the SBA was funded by Congress to administer a loan program directed to Vietnam Era and disabled veterans. Veterans should contact the nearest SBA office.

Livelier Copley Square design wins competition

By David Purcell

Staff writer of The Chronicle, Square, in Middlesex

Boston

Dean Abbott and his colleagues spent more than 700 hours designing a new layout for Boston's historic Copley Square. Competing in a national design competition, Mr. Abbott, principal designer with Clarke & Rapuano Inc. of New York City, was vying for a first prize of $30,000 and a chance to see his plans transformed into concrete, trees, and fountains in this choice location.

The 700 hours was "quite an investment for such a speculative venture" as a design competition, says Domenico Annesse, vice president of the firm. But it paid off. Mr. Abbott's design was chosen last month from among 309 entries.

Despite their speculative nature, design competitions are flourishing. The National Endowment for the Arts encouraged the Copley Square competition and is promoting a number of others.

Michael Pittas, director of the NEA design arts program, says the NEA's efforts are to "democratize" the process of designing public buildings and parks.

"This country has a long heritage of design competitions," he says. The Washington Monument and Boston's Trinity Church (on Copley Square) were designed this way. "But this method fell into disuse," he says. Now design contracts are awarded on the basis of "patronage and celebrity," and are not democratic.

One danger in design competitions, notes Mr. Annesse of Clarke & Rapuano, is that they could attract "trendy stuff and gimmicks." He says that before his firm decides to commit itself to a competition, he "looks at the jury to see if we have a chance. The key to a successful competition is a good jury," he says.

Pittas agrees there can be problems with competitions. "Some fail, some succeed." But, he says, they "unearth new talent. They encourage much greater participation, and give the sponsors a much better chance of meeting their needs."

Carolyn D. Carson, a partner with Sanders, Strickland, Associates in New York, says her small company could afford to invest only about two weeks' effort on the design. Even so, it earned a merit award from the Copley Square judges.

The NEA is providing grants for competitions elsewhere in the country, such as for a Center for Innovative Technology in Virginia, an aquarium in Charleston, S.C., and a housing project in Cincinnati.

The NEA has participated in about 70 competitions since 1980.

Tony Casendino, one of the Copley Square judges, says the prominence of the square was responsible for attracting the more than 300 entries. With Trinity Church at one end and the Boston Public Library at the other, the Copley Square is situated "between some of the best architecture in the country," he says.

The square was redesigned only 15 years ago — also the result of a national competition. But its design is generally admitted to be not working. The square is set off from the surrounding streets by thick concrete walls, with a series of steps leading to a fountain below street level. The square often attracts more drug dealers and dealers than families or vacationers. With few trees and lots of open space, it is often windswept, and bleak.

To ensure that the new design would address these problems, a committee of business leaders, architects, residents, and city officials was formed to prepare guidelines for the competitors. The committee stipulated elevating the plaza to street level, increasing the seating capacity of the square, and increasing the amount of greenery. It asked for space for a cafe, a farmer's market, and occasional performances, public functions, or folk dances, to encourage activity in the square and make it safer.

Urban planner William H. Whyte, the jury chairman, says "Of all the entries, Mr. Abbott's design was the most responsive to the guidelines, in spirit as well as in details. It's a fine, clean design."

Abbott says his concept was for "a place that doesn't try to get away from the city. It reaches out." The design includes paved areas, a fountain, and large areas of grass. "This is a sit-on-the-grass space," he says. And Mr. Abbott makes extensive use of trees, both within Copley Square and across all the adjacent streets.

The city government and local businesses aim to raise $4 million for the renovations, expected to start this fall and be completed in the summer of 1985.

Local piano pupils receive Student Musician Awards

Ten local piano pupils from the Class of Mary Ann Puff, 28 Winter Street, Reading, are registered as members in the National Fraternity of Student Musicians, sponsored by the National Guild of Piano Teachers, Teacher Division of the American College of Musicians.

This group of young piano hobbyists played in the National Piano Playing Auditions, at the Melrose Center and attained honors according to the number of standard classic, romantic and modern pieces chosen from the masters of piano literature.

Each student creditably performed in the presence of an audition judge, Frances C. Emmons. From coast-to-coast over 100,500 piano pupils of the nation will participate in this annual national piano-playing event being held in 700 music centers of the country. Every entrant will be certificated, given an embossed pin, and a year's membership in the National Fraternity of Student Musicians.

Begun at Hardin Simmons University, Abilene, Texas, in 1929, national headquarters are still maintained in Texas.

The students from Reading are: Felicia Spagnoli, Brian Eric Schwalm, Catherine Boness, Phillip Lawrence Boness, William Bartosch.

The students from North Reading are: Kerianne Forrest, Christopher Cory, Sandra Miller, Melissa Celata, Robert Rains.

Feline fanciers on rise

By Keith Hopkins, D.V.M.

Director, Veterinary Medicine
Animal Rescue League of Boston and animal shelters.

A cat is a unique pet that combines a strong streak of independence with an ability to demonstrate deep affection. Cats make ideal pets for people who live in apartments, for the elderly, or for anyone whose time or space is somewhat limited. Cats are clean, neat, easily trained and do not require being taken on long walks.

Cats are gaining in popularity as the primary household pet, perhaps a reflection of a society in which people are more freedom loving, mobile and fond of traveling, which is much easier to do with a cat than with a dog. According to an article in Today's Animal News, there are an estimated 14 million cats today living in 24 percent of American households. The same article notes reports from several veterinarians in urban areas that cats now make up 50 percent of their practice.

Though felines have a reputation for aloofness and fanatic independence, they do require love and frequent demonstrations of affection from their owners, especially stroking and patting since they depend very much on their sense of touch. In fact, research has shown that kittens that are deprived of physical contact either from their mothers or from human owners have a very low rate of survival. So before picking out that cute, fluffy kitten that's waiting at your local shelter, be sure you are prepared to give it love and affection and proper care.

Your responsibilities as a cat owner will include loving the kitten when it grows into an adult cat with hair that sheds and claws that sometimes damage your favorite furniture. They also include providing your pet with the right diet, inoculations, altering and other medical care as needed.

Newburyport Garden tour

Twelve Newburyport gardens and estates will open to the public on Saturday, June 16 for the fifth annual garden tour sponsored by the Historical Society of Old Newbury (Cushing House Museum), 95 High St., Newburyport.

In addition to the Newburyport gardens, there will be gardens in Newbury and West Newbury, all of which is very fitting since proceeds from the tour will be for the 350th celebration of the founding of Newbury to be celebrated in 1985. In 1635, Newbury included West Newbury and New-buryport, and the celebration will include all the towns.

In addition to the tour, there will be a snack bar in the Cushing House garden, book and needlework table, and the popular plant and garden sale in the carriage lane. Hours for all events will be 10 AM to 4 PM.

Rain date will be the next day. Call 462-2681 for further information.

Americana trail

What are your plans for this summer? You can listen to some great bluegrass fiddling at Edaville Railroad in South Carver, Mass. Polka into the night at a Polkabration in New London, Conn. Watch a Wampanoag Indian Wedding at Pli-moth Plantation or a professional bicycle race in New Bedford. Or fill up on stuffles and chowder at a quahog festival in Mystic, Conn.

These are just a few of the things going on this summer along the Americana Trail - a route that links visitor attractions from Mystic, Connecticut, to Plymouth, Massachusetts.

Over 150 special events, fairs, festivals and concert series scheduled from now through the end of the year are listed in the 1984 American Trail Calendar of Events just published by the Bristol County Development Council.

The calendar and a special one containing events of interest to children are available at information centers along the trail or by writing: "Calendar", BCDC, Box BR-976, New Bedford, Mass. 02741.

From garden to plantation to farm, COMING ATTRACTIONS has something for everyone. But if we overlooked your special event of interest to all, write, care of this focal newspaper, and tell us all about it. Strawberry picking can be fine, but it gets hot in the sun. We need other things to try.

Concerts-in-the-Park in Concord begin June 28

With a crash of cymbals and a burst of brass, the Concord Band begins its summertime outdoor concerts-in-the-park series on Thursday, June 28, at the North Bridge Visitors' Center of Minute-man National Historical Park/Concord, Mass. Promptly at 7:30 p.m., Music Director William Toland will conduct the downbeat of the opening fanfare that starts the five-week-long concert series: performances by the 65-member symphonic concert band will also take place on Thursday evenings of July 5, 12, 19, and 26.

The concerts are free and are cancelled in the event of rain. Music Director Toland leads the Band in lively and varied programs with something to appeal to all musical tastes: classical overtures; rock, pop, and jazz music; toe-tapping Dixieland; Broadway show tunes; selections from the traditional and contemporary wind ensemble literature; and plenty of marches.

There are some very distinctive aspects to the concerts this summer. The Concord Band, which has come to be considered one of the outstanding bands in New England, is in the middle of enthusiastically celebrating its Silver Anniversary.

The concert on July 5 will be a very special event: The concert will be dedicated to the upcoming 100th anniversary of the Statue of Liberty, and all donations will go to the Statue's Restoration Project. Featured guest at the concert will be David Moffatt, superintendent of the Statue of Liberty National Monument. Mr. Moffatt is one of only two honorary members of the Concord Band (the other being Maestro Fennell), which recognition he received during his former tenure as Superintendent of Minuteman Park/Concord. Because this is a special concert, there will be a raindate for this concert only - Friday, July 6, at 7:30 p.m.

The band will also play an Independence Day concert on Wednesday, July 4, at 4:00 p.m. at the Emerson Playground in Concord Center - the highlight of The Town of Concord's July 4 festivities.

The type of rousing patriotic music that will be played on July 4 can be heard on The Concord Band's newly released recording entitled, "July 4th With The Concord Band" (which includes such pieces as Henry Fillmore's "Americans We" march, a medley of George M. Cohan tunes, John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" march, and Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture"). The record can be obtained via mail order by sending $8.75 (which includes postage) to: The Concord Band, Box 302, Concord, MA 01742.

Help your kids to good eating habits

Parents are concerned about establishing good eating habits in young children. Nancy C. Stutzman, Extension Home Economist of the Middlesex County Extension Service offers some suggestions.

Respect the child's appetite and don't be too concerned if sometimes he or she doesn't want to eat. When parents make a fuss too often, children may refuse to eat because they like the attention. It's not pleasant attention, but often it's the only time when children feel they can control a situation. If you have a problem like this, try serving your child small portions of nutritious foods that he likes. Talk about something else besides food at the table, and don't nag the child to eat. If your child hasn't eaten anything when the rest of you are done eating, just quietly take away his place and excuse him from the table - and don't give anything else to eat until snack or mealtime. Then only give a small portion. If they want more of a snack, for example, tell them they'll have to wait until next meal like everyone else. Be flexible in deciding when a child has eaten enough food. Serving small portions can be one answer to helping a child feel successful about finishing. Food should never be forced on a child nor should dessert be used as a bribe or reward for eating. Dessert should be nutritious anyway, and one can give a child a small portion even if everything isn't finished. Do reward your child with a hug.

Food preferences - Take advantage of the child's natural food preferences and try to prepare those foods in different ways. Familiarity with foods only eat peanut butter helps children accept sandwiches or cold foods. Children are picky eaters. Try not to worry. Food sometimes because jags don't last forever, they are afraid of the Just try to offer unknown! Keep track nutritious foods and of the foods accepted don't force children to eagerly and serve eat foods you know they dislike.
